STORY 01 · ANNOTATIONS

- Calendar availability is service-specific. Grooming uses a 1–3 hour block per groomer, Training uses fixed 1-hour slots, Boarding uses night-based check-in. The calendar logic must query against service type, not a shared availability pool.
- Full time slots display with strikethrough, not hidden. Hiding them would make it impossible for customers to understand why certain times are unavailable, increasing support contacts.

- 3 The Continue button must be disabled until both a date AND a time slot are selected. Partial selections should not be submittable.
- 4 Desktop shows 4 weeks of the calendar. Mobile truncates to 2–3 weeks with a scroll or "show more" affordance to limit vertical scroll depth on small screens.

Booking Confirmation

"As a Customer, I need to receive an email confirmation after booking, so that I have a record of my scheduled appointment."

Two deliverables: an on-screen success state shown immediately after submission, and a simulated email confirmation mockup showing what the customer receives in their inbox.

STORY 02 · CONFIRMATION ANNOTATIONS

- 1 The booking reference number (e.g., PRU-2025-0611-0042) must appear on-screen, in the email, and be searchable by staff in the dashboard. Without a shared reference, phone-based lookup for customers who lose email access becomes operationally difficult.
- 2 The email confirmation must be triggered server-side at the moment the booking is committed to the database — not on page load. Client-side triggers can fail silently if the user closes the browser before the request completes.
- 3 The cancellation policy is surfaced in the email body, not
